THE FIRST STEPS OF A PATH FINDER

Many of us have questions, but usually we tend to silence them down & choose a path which seems the safest, regardless what we really want to do with our lives. Many of us, including me, still don't know for sure what we really want to do with our lives. And that's really fine. We just need to see & try new & diverse domains, we need to keep us as open as possible to New, in order to find out eventually a trace of what we truly love or, at least, what we truly hate.

1. Say Yes more than No.

Volunteer for something that is interesting for you, gain experience in different fields with different people. The modern world is so much different than what our parents experienced when they had our age.

2. Discover the world

Discuss with new people & have intercultural meetings, go to other countries & live a bit their culture
It offers an out of box experience that you deeply need not just to choose your path, but for you as an individual who must understand the society as a whole.

3. Keep yourself flexible

Even though you could find something that will grasp you passionately all your life, don't close yourself towards the possibility of changing or trying something else. Some passions have expiring dates - don't be shocked when what you're doing now, will not fulfil you in 2 years. We just change. Also the world. Just adapt & go with the flow.

WHEN YOU CAN'T FIND IT, CREATE IT!

Let's ask ourselves...what first occurred to mind when we made the decision of our dream job? A lot of people can agree that their parents were an important guide, others that their teachers and coaches coaches influenced them, and lastly, some people chose according to the current financial and political demands of their society.

As studies have shown, these oftenly followed criteria have proven to lead to a bad profession decision. And that is why we are simply not like our parents, nor coaches. We should not search for an ideal job rather than explore our inner self. We should explore our likings, values and talents, what we enjoy doing and what we imagine ourselves never getting bored of.

An example to this is athletes. But because a sport career has an expiring day, we should consider another important criteria: what challenge us to become better? Is it money? Is it social status? Personal growth? What is success for us?

Having answered those questions one can have a quite clear image of the field or professions he/she may follow. In this era, with millions of opportunities arousing, millions of people turning their hobby into a profession, and millions opportunities to gain abundant knowledge and information, the humankind can achieve anything.

It is never too late to start your inner quest.

THE RIGHT WAY TO PUT YOUR LIFE ON A PAPER

We all come to a time where we need to put our lives on a paper. CV is your chance to show an employer you have the skills and experience needed. Keep reading to discover the top CV writing tips that can make your job application stand out.

DO'S

Include "power" words

Add words such as: achieved, supervised, launched and co-ordinated, when describing your work achievements

Make your CV clear, neat and tidy

Get somebody to check your spelling and grammar. No-one wants to read a CV that is squashed together and includes too much information.

Place the important information up-front

Put experience and education achievements in reverse chronological order.

DON'TS

Hand-write or type your CV

This looks unprofessional and old fashioned.

Put negative information

For example - failed exams, divorces, failed business ventures, reasons for leaving a job

Make your CV more than two pages

You can free up space by leaving out or editing information that is less important.

Lie on Cv

The employers have ways of checking what you put is true.
